Evaluation

Karane was on time as usual. We discussed the properties of noble gasses and the importance of Boyle's Law. Jenny demonstrated a good understanding of the concepts with the practice problems the professor provided; she even knew the atomic weight of gold. She was well-prepared: she had tried to practice problems before coming to our meeting; she had attempted most of her homework; she had detailed lecture notes to which she could refer to during my meeting with her.

She will need to work harder on the computations in order to succeed. Additional practice problems each week were suggested.

We moved our meeting to Tuesday next week because of a road trip and agreed to meet on Thursday as well to review for the midterm.
